Welcome!

The Crown Province of Østgarðr is the greater New York City chapter of the Society for Creative Anachronism, a not-for-profit educational and social organization dedicated to recreating aspects of medieval and Renaissance culture. We read about the period, make and wear the clothes, make and eat the food, build swords and hit our friends (who are wearing armor), build and live in the tents, perform the music and drama, etc.

Østgarðr is part of the East Kingdom and has several cantons: Brokenbridge (Brooklyn), Whyt Whey (Manhattan), and Lions End (Nassau County).

If you would like to submit art for our cover page or any other page, please let your Chronicler know!

In Memoriam

Bright the tear upon the cheek, bright the star in darkest sky, and bright the hearth at journey's end.

Lord Ye-Liu Targai

Lady Aquilina of the Sea Cliffs

When my beloved Lord Targai and I met at Fordham in 1980 he was running the University's fencing program, and also held a peerage in the MSR as Etienne de Montfort. Those of us who have met our loved ones at events, faires, demos... you know the drill. The sunlight coming down through the green leaves, a campfire crackling nearby, the scents and sounds of spring or high summer or early fall, the rakish grin, the flashing eyes... it was at the 1981 Sands Point Renaissance Faire that I knew that he was the one. Circumstances came between us, but it was 22 years later that I still became his wife.

Targai's study of Lama-Pai Kung Fu under Grandmaster Sifu Chan Tai San led him to an interest in Wuxia (Medieval China). Yeh-Liu Targai is loosely based on a Kara-Khitan noble who became a sort of Viceroy / Grand Vizier to Ghengis Khan during the Liao Dynasty. His prowess with the axe was a nod to Iron Ox, his favorite character from his favorite book, All Men Are Brothers by Pearl S. Buck.

Targai was well known for his fencing skills. He began study at the age of 11 under Frederick Rohdes, the same formidable classical fencing instructor who brought us local luminaries HRH Kriegstauffen von Nort (MSR), HRH Andreas de Vulpes (MSR), and Maestro Ramon Martinez. Targai's other interests were commedia dell'arte (he was inordinately fond of playing the "Captain" character), dancing, games of every possible type, and oh yes he did love my mead.

My beloved Lord was brilliant, witty, fun-loving, kind, modest, and fiercely honorable. We deeply loved and understood each other, and only the knowledge that he fights and feasts in Valhalla now mitigates the pain of having lost his physical presence in Midgard. I am extremely proud and honored to have been his Lady for 18 years in Midgard, and his Valkyrie forever. He had so many friends, and was as merry over cups as he could be ferocious in the lists. Those who would remember him, know that this is the finest comfort you can give to his family and friends. He watches now from the place of joy. Hail to you my beloved Hero, Yeh-Liu Targai. Your name will never die.

Viscount Sir Edward Zifran of Gendy

Viscount Edward Zifran of Gendy, 103rd Knight of the Society and 7th Tyger of the East, passed away on July 15th, following a stroke.

Edward's impact on the Society as a whole cannot be overstated, and yet that impact was achieved largely by building individual relationships. A quiet and thoughtful man, self-conscious and humble, he could say a great deal with just a simple nod.

— East Kingdom Gazette, "In Memoriam: Viscount Edward Zifran of Gendy." 28 July 2020.

The il-Khanate of Østgarðr Remembers Sir Edward

by Suuder Saran il-Khan and Lada Monguligin il-Khatun

One man known to many—thousands of stories. A paragon of our time, yet a humble country Knight with a smile of absolute joy that could turn mischievous in a second, or into a scolding that could make even the toughest of men shrink.

As he told it, years ago in a time when fighters measured an opponent by size, Sir Edward was on the small side, and was seen as less of a threat. But as he trained, Sir Edward focused on speed. Then, when the others started to have a hard time taking him down, and he started felling his opponents faster than anyone else, they gave him the nickname of "Fast Eddie". It stuck, and songs were sung saying not to blink, for that is all the time he needs to strike.

Sir Edward has been in my SCA sphere since I first found the Union Square practice. He was running drills, teaching footwork and how to throw a shot. I remember him hanging back, observing the fighting, and then calling over a new fighter to correct her, teaching her how to block a shot with sword in one hand and a coffee in the other.

At the time I had no idea who Sir Edward was or his legendary status in the SCA. He was just a really nice guy teaching us to fight.

Later, when I learned about his many awards and achievements, he still remained the same down-to-earth guy who was always there to lend advice, and give perspective and insight. Because of this I never experienced "Peer fear" with him. Sir Edward was one of the hardest-working SCAdians I've ever known. Pennsic was his best time: months he spent, each year, helping to put it together; then days and nights on The Watch. He had a sit-down dinner with friends and family each night. I don't know when he slept, during Pennsic.

He treated everyone equally, no matter their standing or title. He respected what people had done—the Royals, Local Nobility—but would still treat all of them the same. Sir Edward always reminded us of humility: no matter what we accomplished in the SCA, what recognition we received, "that and $2.75 will get you on the subway."

He always stuck to his principles and did what he thought was right. He encouraged female fighters during times when it was frowned upon to have them on the field, and he took up needlework when it was seen as less manly. He challenged people to think for themselves and work towards something better, but he still stayed true to period teachings. To him, a true knight knew more than just combat and prowess, they needed challenges of the mind as well. Take his test, and you might get a glimpse of what was expected of a knight of the realm during period times. Then reward yourself with a Coffee Crisp (his favorite reward for those that took his test). You'll see why in Østgarðr we have them in court as "a nice light snack".

At my vigil, for his piece of advice he told me: "Don't be a d!ck."

I could go on for days. So could the thousands of lives he touched across multiple kingdoms and all the SCA—one humble country knight who has made a huge difference to so many. His loss is going to be felt deep. I'm glad for the moments I had with him. I'll forever remember them and let them guide me. If Sir Edward had not found his family years before, I would have adopted him myself. For he is family. I'll remember his face and his voice until my dying day.

I won't stop learning either, Ed. One new thing a day, right? No matter how trivial. One step each day. I may not know where I'm going all the time but I'll get there.

With all the warmth I can muster in my heart. Until we meet again, my friend. Hopefully at a nice dinner table, with roaring hearth, good food, good friends, and some great drink. Goodbye, Viscount Edward Zifran of Gendy. Østgarðr will miss you. May the winds take you where you need to be.

"Dear Fast Eddie "

by Lord Ervald LaCoudre Edwardson the Optimistic

In lieu of flowers, it was requested that donations be made in Sir Edward's name to the Portersville Food Pantry or your local food pantry, as food insecurity had been an important issue for him. Lord Ervald has joined his efforts to this cause, and would like it to be known that he will send a free songbook to folks who donate to this or their local food pantry. These songbooks were written several years ago and include original SCA songs and filks (including "Dear Fast Eddie"), cartoons, and illustrations. Send him your proof of donation and your mailing address: this is a great way to both honor Sir Edward and share some SCA history.
